

Name of Structure

Built circa

This structure was built as a telegraph repeater station by the Anglo-Newfoundland Telegraph Company. It served as a railway station starting in 1900 – first under the Reid Newfoundland Company and later under Canadian National Railway – and remained in use until 1984. The station is built in the Second Empire style.

Designated as a Municipal Heritage Structure by Community.